Escape the fast pace of the city and meet in picturesque rural Maryland at the Donaldson Brown Center.
Given to the University of Maryland, Baltimore, this private estate of the late industrialist F. Donaldson Brown originally was the setting for entertaining world dignitaries, including presidents Franklin D. Roosevelt and Lyndon Baines Johnson. It is open year-round for your retreat, workshop, continuing education seminar, or special event.

Whether you are planning a conference or a special occasion, our highly skilled professional staff will provide you with a unique and memorable experience.
Ideal for groups of 20 to 50, for one-day meetings or overnight stays, the secluded estate and grounds are minutes from I-95 but miles from distraction.

The University of Maryland, Baltimore’s Donaldson Brown Center has all of the ambiance of a southern estate, updated for your business meeting. Our on-site manager and staff can arrange the main meeting room and breakout areas to accommodate your organization and presentations.
Ranging from large suites to smaller rooms, the estate contains 15 elegant and richly appointed guest rooms, all with spectacular views of the Susquehanna River or the beautiful surrounding grounds. Seven guest rooms contain private baths, eight guest rooms utilize shared bathrooms. An elevator and second floor bedroom suite can accommodate the physically impaired.
Enjoy the river view during a crab feast or barbecue on the back lawn, where conference tables become picnic tables. Choose your meals from a menu of regional and seasonal specialties. Indoors, the dining room is large enough for a banquet but arranged to encourage conversation.
Celebrate your special day at the Donaldson Brown Center. Your wedding ceremony can take place high upon a cliff overlooking the panoramic view of the Susquehanna River. Depending on the number of guests in your party, your reception can be held inside the mansion or outside in tented facilities.

Unforgettable location for weddings, reunions, business retreats, and much, much more.
