Reporting Misconduct

Our Commitment:

The University of Maryland, Baltimore is committed to a culture that is reflective of our Core Values. All members of our UMB Community are responsible for creating that shared Culture.

If you have experienced, witnessed, or suspect someone has acted contrary to our Code of Ethics, Core Values, Policies or Procedures, or violated a law report your concerns.

The UMB Hotline can be accessed at: https://www.umaryland.edu/umbhotline/

This site includes the link for filing electronically or the number to call if you prefer to report via telephone. Reports made through the Hotline can be anonymous!

Statement of Non-Retaliation:

Fear of reprisals should not be a deterrent to reporting known or suspected misconduct. Retaliation includes any adverse action against a person because he or she has made a complaint in good faith or participated in a University process. Retaliation will not be tolerated. If a member of the UMB Community suspects they have experienced retaliation, please report it using the Hotline.

Navigating the Hotline:

Just as fear of reprisals should never be a deterrent, neither should navigating the system. When you initiate a report, you will be asked to, if you know, identify the type of misconduct.

At all times, if you are unsure what category the misconduct falls into, or if it might fall into more than one category, just click other and UMB will determine how to proceed!

When making a report you will be given a Report Key, please keep it and check the report to see if UMB has questions or needs clarifying information to address your concerns.
