Other Common Work Authorization Types

NOTE: OIS does not need to be contacted regarding hiring of individuals in these statuses. While on visas, individuals with the work authorizations listed below are often not under UMB's immigration sponsorship.

Work Authorization Type	Definition
F-1 on-campus	UMB F-1 students are permitted to work at UMB for up to 20 hours a week during enrollment periods; they may work full-time during official school breaks. Student's I-20 issued by the UMB OIS is evidence of this work authorization. Are usually employed in student employee categories (Empl Class 14 or 16). This is only applicable to students enrolled in degree programs at UMB. If you are hiring an F-1 student from another university, they will need either CPT authorization, OPT authorization, or a letter of authorization from student's international office
F-1 CPT	F-1 student has obtained work authorization from the international office at the school they attend because of a tie between their curriculum and the work being done. Student would show an I-20 with CPT authorization on page 2.
F-1 OPT	F-1 Student has obtained an EAD card from USCIS to be used to gain training in their field of study. Duration is commonly 12 months, but may be less in some cases.
F-1 STEM OPT	F-1 student has obtained (or will obtain) an extension of their F-1 OPT for an additional 24 months to gain additional training in their STEM field of study The Supervisor will need to complete form I-983 Training Plan and is required to attest to certain conditions (See "What is STEM OPT?" for details).
J-2 EAD	A J-2 is a spouse of a J-1. J-2s are eligible to apply to USCIS for work authorization, for which they will obtain an EAD card. A J-2 with an EAD may work anywhere in the U.S.
Pending PR EAD	Individuals who are in the process of adjusting to permanent residency may receive an EAD from USCIS that allows them to work.
