Question: Why do my monthly community solar bills not match up to the same month as my BGE bills?

Answer:

The solar credits generated by your local community solar farm may not match up perfectly month-to-month due to a billing lag of up to 90 days (this is why your community solar company asks for 90-days notice for terminating your contract). See the following example bills, and use the highlighter colors for guidance.

You'll notice the invoice period (which is when the solar farm produced energy for your credits) for community solar and the billing period for BGE are an approximate match but the statement and issue dates are off by a couple of months. You'll see that the credits applied are equal on both statements, even though the BGE bill was from April and the community solar provider's bill was from June. Finally, you'll see you were charged $10 \%$ less on your community solar bill than the credit that was applied to your BGE bill.
